Since climate change is a very important process concerning everybody on our planet, but a problem that stays very much in the media and far from ordinary people, I decided to develop an artistic contribution out of it. So my report is about the changing face of the earth due to climate shifts and their consequences.

I laid 5 layers of Japanese dipping paper on top of each other of approximately A0 size. Using a brush and Ecoline paint, I drew the Earth on the paper on top. Because of the structure of the paper, the paint leaked through and left traces on the other 4 sheets of paper, less and less on each layer. My human hand, which draws the Earth, is also a suggestion for human intervention on our planet. Because of overuse, the planet it is being diminished. In the left corner below on every sheet the same text appears, taken from an official source explaining the expected consequences of global warming.
